

Facilitating Trainer Job Specification

Job Title: Facilitating Trainer

Employer: First Response Training and Consultancy Services Limited

Pay: £25 per hour

Job Type: Part-time

Job Summary

First Response Training is looking for individuals with experience in educating others and supporting autistic people and/or people with learning disabilities. The role involves supporting autistic co-trainers and co-trainers with learning disabilities to deliver the Oliver McGowan Mandatory Training on Learning Disabilities and Autism.

Key Responsibilities

- Deliver online and face-to-face training sessions alongside co-trainers who are experts with lived experience of learning disabilities and/or autism
- Co-ordinate with co-trainers to ensure cohesive and effective training delivery
- Provide support to co-trainers during training delivery
- Create an engaging, inclusive and supportive learning environment
- Ensure consistency and quality in delivery

Person Specification

- Experience supporting autistic people and/or people with learning disabilities
- Experience educating or training others
- Strong communication and interpersonal skills
- Computer proficiency to deliver online training
- Empathy and understanding

Benefits

- Improve the quality of health and social care
- Professional development
- Flexible working arrangements

Application

Complete our online application form at firstresponsetraining.com

Induction

Successful candidates will receive an in-depth induction before delivering any training. This includes completing a Train the Trainer course specifically for the Oliver McGowan Mandatory Training on Learning Disabilities and Autism. This training is provided by First Response Training.

About the Training

The Oliver McGowan Mandatory Training on Learning Disabilities and Autism is a government-recommended training programme. It allows regulated service providers to meet the statutory requirements for staff to receive appropriate training on learning disabilities and autism.